In Search Of...

No two people breathe the same breath. The mixture of gasses from breath to breath nearly always varies slightly. I can't tell you that the air in your lungs is 70% nitrogen, 20% oxygen, and 10% carbon dioxide, hydrogen, and other various trace gasses without making myself somewhat of a liar. In the same way, I can't tell you of the blood in your veins, the thoughts in your mind, the dreams you hope to obtain. I can't tell you what it means to search. I can't lump you 1,800 CHSers into a single school desk, scribble a formula on the blackboard and proclaim, "Here's your life! Take it or leave it!" All I have to do is take a stroll down these renovated halls to see that. We are too many individuals to fool with some false doctrine, and I like to imagine that I would be the last to tell you what to think. That's your job. That's what puts us where we are--the closest thing to a throbbing mass of humanity as I've ever seen. And so we continue, In Search Of...

lori michele isaac van deman

As the roar of bulldozers and jackhammers faded and the dust of renovation settled, ACHS found itself with a structure far superior to the previous one.

Moving into the new school proved a tedious task. Teachers and staff put in many hours of hard work preparing Columbine for the opening day. History teacher Mrs. Herring expressed her anxiety that the school would not be ready in time for the students when she stated, "We were worried about the students having to come back to a filthy school." For two weeks teachers and custodians spent seven hours a day cleaning, assembling desks, and moving boxes, shelves and books. Language arts teacher Mrs. Lucas stated, "It was the hardest work I've done in years." Said history teacher Mr. Herring, "It was kind of tedious work, but it wasn't too bad because we all had a sense of humor." During the move two...

New Building Bonuses:

- 230,000 square feet
- 1,950 lockers
- improved athletic facilities
- largest weight room in Jefferson County
- doors and windows in classrooms
- 461 student parking places

At an assembly held on the first day of classes, student Body President Matt Lausten and Principal Ron Mitchell prepare to officially open the new Columbine High School by cutting the ribbon. Following the ceremony, Senate leaders led the student body into its sparkling new school.

The renovations moved the main entrance of CHS to the south. The east-facing doors that once fronted the building now serve as the faculty entrance.

...teachers sustained injuries. Language Arts Teacher Mrs. Kelly bruised her foot while moving boxes and science teacher Mr. Sneddon acquired tendon damage in his arm from moving cabinets.

Another important stage in the occupation of the new school was the Leadership Lock-in held August 10 through August 11. Selected students who attended the workshop learned how to have a positive impact on their school and community by fundraising, becoming involved and solving problems in a creative manner. The lock-in featured recreational games, team building, and a motivational speaker. Mr. Chester, the motivational speaker, "related to all of us in a positive way and kept us enthused," said Senior Jen Temple.

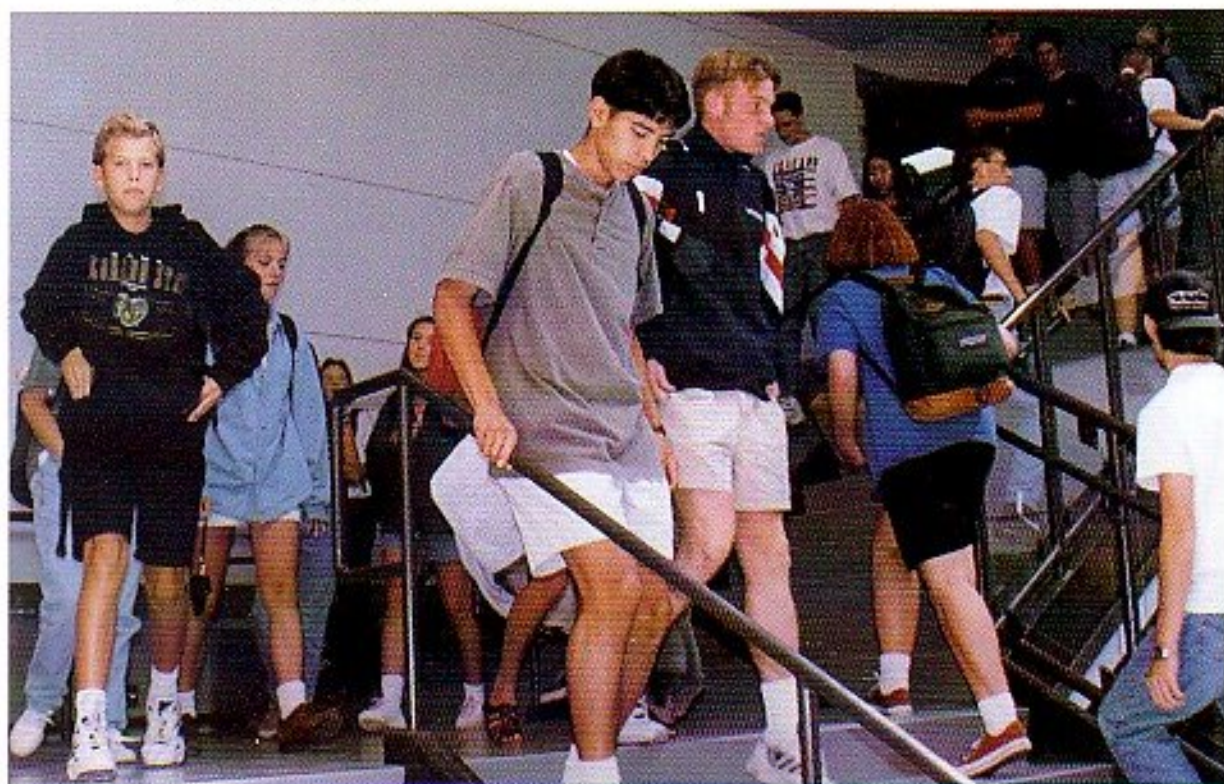

The students and community embraced the new Columbine with great enthusiasm. The transition from old to new, although difficult at times, proved to be worthwhile. An Open-House, held September 25, brought the approval of CHS... (cont. on page 8...)

Senior Julie Haas exclaimed, "It's beautiful--especially when the sun comes over the school in the morning." Freshman Kelly Burgesser enjoyed the "big and modern building." However, because of the size and new layout of the school, some students had a difficult time finding their way around. For instance, Junior Missy Mindell complained, "It took me a week to finally know where to go!" Student Body President Matt Lausten added, "It doesn't look like Columbine yet. We need to put some Rebel Pride into it."

Did you know that . . . ?

- Each student now has his/her own locker
- We have two new softball fields and four new tennis courts
- Columbine is now the largest school in Jefferson County
- The total cost of building the new school was 15.1 million dollars
- The construction took 15 months
- Both the auditorium and the cafeteria seat 100 more people

...A Good Time

What are we all supposed to be doing at this point in our lives? Sure, we're going to school and trying to keep our heads above water while we hunt for knowledge. We are preparing to separate ourselves from the years of security we've had while attending school and begin a personal quest in a world where there are often some uncertainties that can be a little, let's say, unsettling. In the meantime, while we break apart from our life of education, which is mapped out for the most part, we step into the realm of our existence where we have the opportunity to explore so at some point we can say that we've actually experienced life...and survived. Some of us take advantage of our spare time and just slack off, mindlessly sprawling out on various items of furniture or possibly the first place we just happen to drop. We believe if we sow a leisurely life, we will reap the fruits of relaxation. Meanwhile, the rest of us engage in more physically and mentally demanding activities, such as maintaining a job (making filthy lucre, bread, shekels, gelt, stumpy, dough...money) or joyously recreating (amusing ourselves to the best of our ability). Of course, we don't venture through our time of leisure all alone. We and our friends must take turns acting as tour guides of sorts. Our friends are sometimes the ones who say, "Have you been here; seen this; done that...etc.." We often listen to their advice and, whether it's good or bad, they have helped us to discover an area of life which we either like or dislike. We are each in search of the life which suits us best.

No Fair Weather

The shared experiences of high school forge important and meaningful friendships that earn the potential to last a lifetime.

Sophomore Tom Kostelecky stated, "Friends are people you can talk to and have lots of fun with," while Junior Andrea Voehl recognized, "Friends are people who love you for your stupid sides."

When times are rough, Junior Kerri Held declared, "Friends will always be there to listen and understand." Freshman Kerri Weaver noted, "When your day just isn't going right, a friend's smile will always brighten your day." Senior Eric Jacobson commented, "Friends are for sharing experiences with, some good, some bad. Friends are people who you can do things with now and in a couple of years look back and laugh."

Friends play an important role in our lives. After all, that's what friends are for.

Motor- vation

Whether it's four-wheeling or mountain biking, students at Columbine enjoyed the challenge of the open road.

Mountain biking created excitement and a physical challenge for many students. Senior Todd Bergman expressed, "I like the thrill of the speed and the vigorous climb." Senior Matt McCormick added, "It's an individual sport, finding the line between being in or out of control."

Senior Troy Tomasko who enjoyed four-wheeling explained, "I do it to prove what my car can do and for the constant seeking of speed and power." Senior Tony Everhart commented, "While driving in the mountains there can be some really incredible views."

While these may seem like inexpensive sports, the cost could easily reach in the thousands. Senior Dax Burgos stated, "I want a more powered engine that will cost around $2,000."

Mission Impossible

With the busy schedule of school, work and extra curricular activities, why did Columbine students choose to spend their after school hours working? For the money, right? Well, not necessarily; it seemed that many CHS students worked for other reasons.

When asked why she chose to get a job at Cub Foods, Junior Darcie Ryant replied, "I work because it gets me out of the house and gives me an excuse to put off my homework."

Other students worked because they enjoyed their jobs. Junior Jennica Castle, who worked at McDonald's, stated, "I have a lot of fun with the people I work with," and Freshman Sunnee Hoppe babysat because she "loves kids."

Regardless of the reasons why people worked, money was definitely an issue. Junior Tara Williamson admitted, "There is no reason to work except for the money!"

Crowd Control

CHS fans take their stands seriously

Throughout this school year in a lively show of Columbine pride, many students grabbed their pals and headed for the stadium.

Some Rebels attended sporting events to check out the opposite sex. Senior Michael Francks revealed, "I like to go to all the games because I love to look at the women from other schools."

Seniors Jen Temple and Kristi Tiefel noted, "We love to go to swim meets because we can look at all those gorgeous guys in speedos!"

Other students went to games just to have a fun time. Junior cheerleader Robin Szekeres stated, "I go to baseball games because it's the only sport we don't have to cheer for."

Attending sporting events was a common pastime for Rebels, as Sophomore Tyson Liverant said, "Everybody gets excited, and that's where Columbine's spirit is."

Campbell's Kids...

CHS students fired up the Covens hoping to cook their way into the future.

Columbine's Life Management class had many future chefs, such as Freshman Jeff Edwards who plans on "hopefully being a chef" and Freshman Nick Williams who wants "to cook at a restaurant."

Columbine chefs also displayed their talent at home, such as Junior Katie Wetherbee who commented, "I like to cook at home because I'm the only one who knows what's in the secret sauce." For many parents, it's not what their kids cook that makes them happy; it's just the fact that they're cooking. Freshman Layne Newton claimed, "My parents like my food because then they don't have to cook."

Beyond their home-cooked meals and the classroom stoves, students also made meals for the public. Junior Allison Micek stated, "My job at Pizza Hut is more fulfilling when the customers like my food."

(yah yah yah yah)

Students of all grades enjoyed playing games, even when forced to be "it" or to use the silver Monopoly thimble instead of the shoe.

Many students liked to play cards or board games, like Freshman Luke Kwerneland who said, "I play chess."

Junior Brie Ann Starkey, commenting on a favorite pastime, said, "We all go shoot pool at night" and Junior Amanda Johnson remarked, "Ping pong can be fun."

Some students preferred to engage in outdoor activities, such as Junior Brooke Lening who played trampoline games. She remarked, "My friends and I play cat and mouse."

Sophomores Stephanie Matthews and Meagan Stirling have found a unique game of their own. They stated, "We dance and sing at the Rockies games to make money that people put in our cups."

Playing a game with friends is lots of fun and a great way to relieve stress...as long as no one has to be "it"!

Happy, By Law

According to the Constitution we all have the right to the pursuit of happiness, and this rings true even here at Columbine.

Junior Mike Zakhem found happiness in "waking up at 6:30 in the morning and realizing it's Saturday." Senior Jessica Kirk commented, "Splashing in puddles with no shoes on in the rain makes me happy."

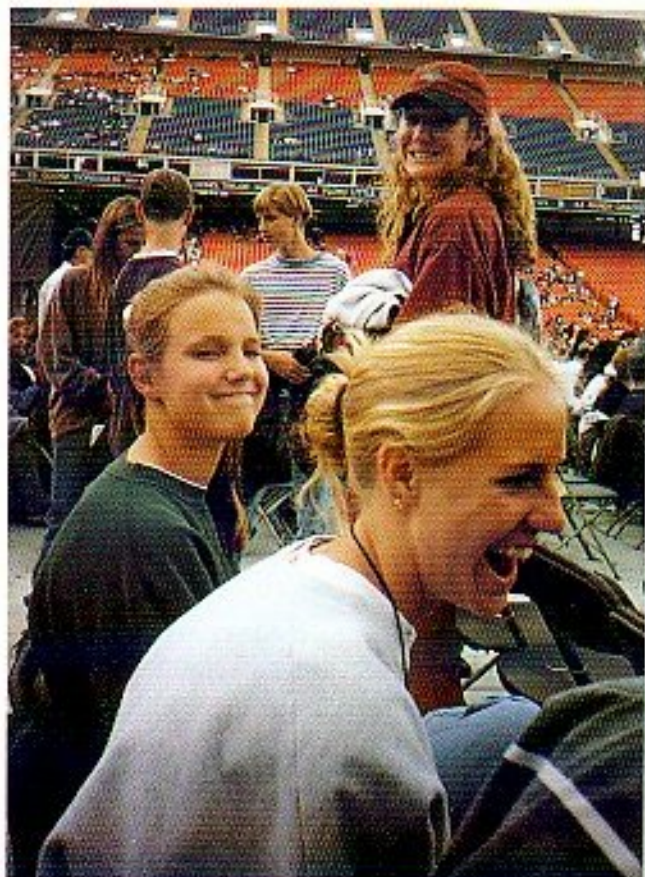

Others found happiness in the thrill of competition. Senior Anne Shomo discovered many things that made her happy such as, "riding horses and winning volleyball games." For Junior Jerry Pernicka, a happy moment is, "After I finish my race at a swim meet, I look up and see that everyone else is still swimming." Senior John Taggart found joy in "caffeine and volleyball games," while Senior Emily Zaynard found happiness in "David Bowie and M&M's." Sophomore Belinda Kimball summed up her happiness as simply, "life and love."

Tree Rash & Leaf Burn

your usual camping trip

Some of the funniest and most unexpected experiences occur in the outdoors.

Junior Kim Sebesta recalled, "Once, while sledding, I fell out and the sled ran over my foot. Later I found out that I had fractured it!"

The outdoors was not friendly to Sophomore Noah Wells, either. He agreed, "I was trying to cross a river while carrying a camera. So when I slipped on a rock and fell, one hand was holding the camera out of the water while the other hand searched for a branch to pull myself out by!"

Danger was present as Senior Ryan Goodwin exclaimed, "Seniors Jeff Sales, Jacob Schwiegerath, Jason Jackson and I were climbing a tower. Finally, Sales said, 'Guys, I don't think I can climb any higher' and he fell about twenty feet!"

Apparently, adventure finds its place in the outdoors!

Get A Watch!

Routine-routine-school-practice-game or work-homework-bed-school..., " Junior Elizabeth Hyde outlined as she expressed her displeasure of busy schedules, and agreed that sports, work, school and other extracurricular activities left teens with little time to spare.

Junior Matt Staver indirectly agreed and exclaimed, "Catch me later; I have to get to class."

Our generation was known for either working too much or much too much. Junior Amanda Johnson agreed and commented, "When I work all day, I end up doing homework all night."

And with most CHS students, their day had only begun at 2:30 when school let out. "After school I have cross country, then either soccer practice or work, and sometimes both," explained Junior Darcie Ryant. "Then when I get home, I have to do homework."

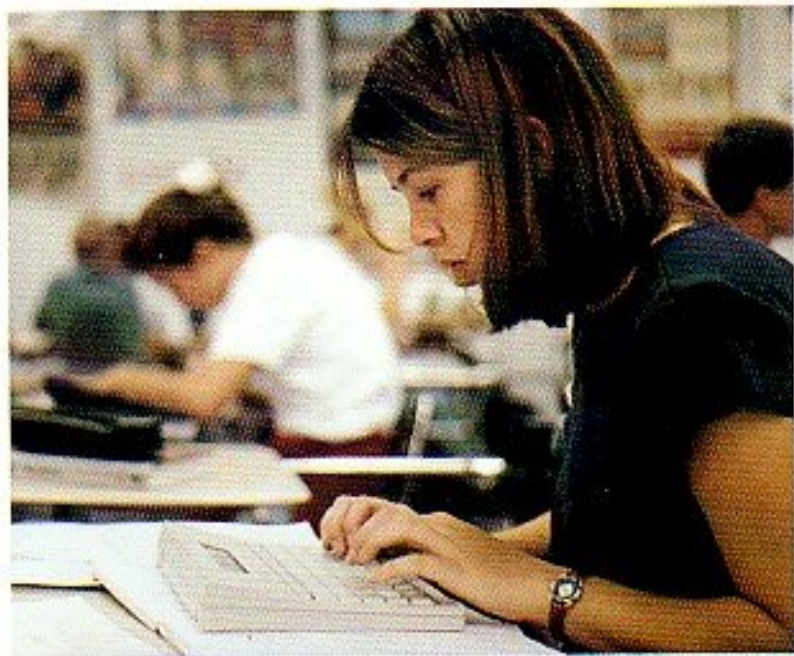

And what usually got sacrificed? As Freshman Monica Dubois so eloquently put it, "sleep." elisa gillmore

Freedom To Express

More
than the Material Girl,
we are
us

Whether it's art or desecration, decorating one's body (or car) became a common sight in the nineties.

For many, tattoos have personal meaning and make people feel unique. Senior Anne Shomo reflected, "Tattoos are distinctive of our generation; before only bikers got Harley Davidson tattoos on their arms and now even soccer players do it."

What if the body being decorated belongs to a car? Students also personalized their cars with hand-painted caricatures and patterns. On his car Senior Brian Mears detailed "the idols of my crazy side, Calvin and Hobbes, then came philosophical Winnie-the-Pooh and then the environmental Lorax."

Finally, students found new and interesting ways to dress up their tresses whether it was using accessories or trying a different color every week. Senior Cortnae Morris explained her hair dying fetish by saying, "I just like different styles. I want to stand out!"

angela rosenthal

Isn't It August yet?

Planning for the upcoming year and studying in paradise was on the summer agenda for many Rebels.

Organizations such as Senate, Peer Counseling, Yearbook and the Cheer squads attended retreats or camps to get acquainted. Senior Peer Counselor Marc Summers explained his camp, "At the ropes course the peer counselors learned that trust is the bond that holds people together. We had to trust each other to get us through difficult and challenging situations."

Referring to Yearbook camp, Editor Matthew Howell stated, "We went to camp to learn the different ways to make our yearbook better and to avoid making mistakes."

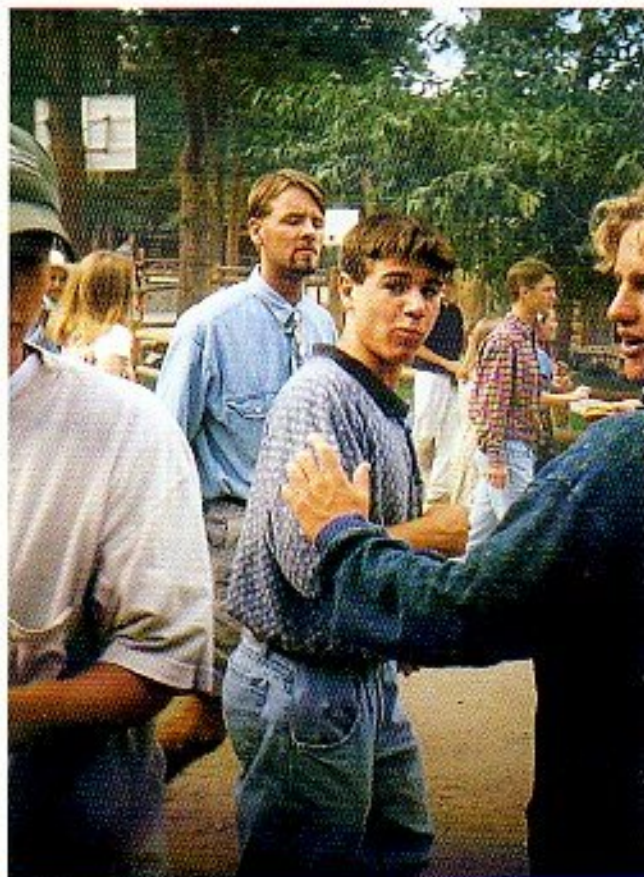

Others were able to study in Hawaii for two weeks. This may seem like paradise, but Junior Sarah Konecny admitted, "The Biology trip was strenuous and we were up past midnight each night doing homework. I learned more in those two weeks than in a whole year."

Iron Kids!

Health is more than meats
the muscle

Welcome to 1996, where fit is fashion and flab is drab. This year, Columbine students found many new and exciting ways of getting exercise while having fun.

Many students, including Sophomore Belinda Kimball, played school sports to stay in shape. "I play softball," she stated, "because it makes me buff." Seniors Melissa Kuiken and Steve Cope also participated in sports. Both were captains of Columbine's cross country team.

Some Rebels opted for less conservative fitness routines. Freshman Justin Carlson "watched Richard Simmons work out videos," while Junior Justin Welch "stood knee deep in cold water while fishing."

Staying fit was hard work for many. However, Juniors Amy Garcia and Dani Scoggins found that maintaining optimum health was as easy as "eating Wheaties."

Art Fetish

Those who took art classes found grades, but for people who pursued outside artistic goals, self-fulfillment found them.

No matter what art form people tried, it resulted in personal satisfaction. Roger Green, guitarist of the band Idle Mind, stated, "In music I can express thoughts that I couldn't any other way."

People can learn a lot from art. Senior Chris Guillot explained what martial arts taught him, "I've gained self-confidence, discipline and coordination." Ballet dancer Junior Amanda Maher supported this by saying, "Dancing taught me self control and how to control my movements."

If art takes this much effort, would artists recommend it? Dana Wiggins explained why she draws, "I like it because it expresses who I am." Painter Jenny Anderson added, "Pursue art. Try as many forms as possible because in the end it's worth it."

the town

Students at Columbine couldn't wait to spend their weekends at the hottest places.

Many took advantage of what the cities offered, like Junior Hilary Kramsvogel who enjoyed
"going up to Boulder to cliff dive." Dancing at clubs like the Marques in Boulder was also popular, according to Sophomore Kelly Morris.

Other students headed to downtown Denver to relax over a cup of coffee in coffee shops like Paris on the Platte or the Market. Junior Jessica Boone preferred, "Starbucks for their frappachino swirls."

Some students opted for outdoor activities, like Sophomore Katie Kellogg who spent her sunny weekends
"scuba diving" at her local pool.
For Senior Ted Black weekend enjoyment was "rock climbing and playing bingo" with his parents.

Wherever students spent their weekends, they had fun.

W, My Pancreas...

Many CHS students chose to escape the boredom of everyday activities by adding some adventure to their lives.

For some, adventure meant to be regularly engaged in excitement while others preferred an occasional thrill. Freshman Sara Arbogast recalled, "I went para-sailing over the Atlantic Ocean and free-falled 600 feet." For Sophomore Colleen Colbert an exciting adventure included "repelling off the edge of a cliff and experiencing the awesome feeling of near death!" Sophomore Eric Armstrong remembered when he "went car surfing" on his friend's Pontiac.

Skateparks provided thrills for Junior Ryan Davis who engaged in "extreme rollerblading" with friends where they did "tricks on rails and half-pipes." Junior David Peterson enjoyed going to "Thrillseekers because when you're hanging by two fingers twenty feet above a cement floor, there's just a small rush."

CHS

Crazy-

twin Greek disco

This year's Homecoming proved to be successful as Rebels showed their spirit and pride.

On Monday students observed strange hair styles on Crazy Hair Day, then enveloped themselves in Greek togas for Tuesday's Toga Day. Platform shoes and neon colors were the mode for Disco Day, Wednesday. Responding to Disco Day, Junior Anjelce Duncan exclaimed, "I liked the chest hair people drew on themselves!" Clones were seen roaming the halls on Thursday for Twin Day and the week culminated on Friday when each class wore its allotted colors. Freshman Aaron Warren liked the week because "people could wear something crazy without getting made fun of."

Though the Homecoming Pep assembly takes place every year, this year's assembly was different. Students... (cont. on next page)

...showed much more pride and spirit than in past years. Senior Luke Klepper, co-emcee of the assembly along with Senior Nate Brown, commented, "This year's assembly was the best in years due to the participation and enthusiasm of the crowd." The assembly contained a slide show with pictures of students from Columbine's early years. Junior Rachel Shakowski found that "it was the best part because there were some crazy looking people to laugh at." Football coach and teacher Ivory Moore stressed, "The Homecoming assembly sets the stage for all of the Homecoming festivities."

The Rebel football team proved itself by winning its first Homecoming game in three years. The Highlands Ranch Falcons fell victim to the Rebels by a score of 14 to 13. The Rebels were led by Senior Mike Madsen who scored both of the Rebels' touchdowns and Senior Erik Boykin who played great offense and had an interception on defense. Boykin expressed, "It felt great to win because those are the games you really want."

R emember When...

...Some CHS students worried throughout the game, such as Freshman Lori Hinchey who stated, "I was happy and relieved that we didn't lose again."

Because of the victory, students were in good spirits when they donned their suits and dresses for the annual Homecoming dance. The commons area came alive with extravagant decorations matching the theme, "Total Eclipse of the Heart." The atmosphere created a romantic evening for the students who attended. Many felt the dance went well and was a success. "It was my last Homecoming,"

Senior Jeff Sales stated, "Everything turned out great." Sophomore Angela Edgerton agreed stating, "The music selection was perfect for dancing." Others met minor obstacles such as Sophomore Cassidy Stewart who recalled, "My contact fell in my rice at dinner and my date found it about five minutes later." Junior Mike Penny added, "Picking up my date, I backed into a mailbox and scratched my parents' car."

...Ourselves

Look around. What do you see? Maybe a variety of different people crowded in the halls or sitting in a noisy classroom. If everyone were the same, our lives would be dull and uninteresting. There would not be the athletes training for or defending the school's name, or the musician strolling to class whistling the melody of his/her favorite song. This variety provides us with a chance to define our individuality as a class and on our own. The Freshmen, carefree and a bit timid, are exploring what they want to accomplish in the next four years, making new friends and experiencing their new environment. For some, the changes they will experience will impact them forever. Whether it be their first boy/girlfriend, first party or first defeat in an event, these moments are milestones. The Sophomores are in a league of their own. They have completed their first year of high school and are beginning to face the challenges of growing up. For some, the burden of homework has become heavier, the jingling of car keys has become louder and the extra hours of having a job become a harsh reality. Last, but not least, the Juniors or the "Upperclassmen," have been presented with new choices and decisions. More classes have been offered, some challenging (chemistry), some a bit easier (an extra hour off). Signing up for the ACT's and SAT's takes this class one step further to graduating, going to college and planning for the future. The problem of juggling the busy schedules with the hours of homework, jobs and extra curricular activities seems endless. Yet, at the same time, our individuality binds us together. We are all pieces of a large puzzle which make up Columbine High School. Without each individual, the puzzle would not be complete.

Freshman

The freshman year is a year of exploration... learning to see the world from a step above the junior-high level. It is the year where we (hopefully) learn how to walk in the halls without being an obstruction, how to write a high school essay, and how to eat lunch in less than half an hour. If we're lucky, we learn how to bum a ride to school and to lunch from an upper-classman. But most importantly, we gain maturity, which we will continue to gain through the rest of our lives: from high school, to college, to work, through parenthood and old age and on down the line. This is the year where we, the Freshmen, start to pull together as the

Although the dictionary definition of "sophomoric" is "immature and overconfident," our class of 1998 was a far cry from either. Throughout trials of learning to drive, Biology, and American Literature and History, Sophomores kept their class spirits high and made their presence known at our school. Sophomores are at the in between stage in high school: they are underclassmen, yet they are nearly as knowledge-able as they shall ever be about the workings of their atmosphere. They are the

The 10 Best Things About Being a Sophomore

10. Learning the true meaning of "sophomoric" in Language Arts.
  9. You can disown those "too-cool" seniors who drove you around last year.
  8. A small step toward equality (mind you, a very, VERY small step).
  7. You're the top o' the Bottom
  6. The possibility of being the Bottom o' the Top (NEXT year).
  5. Full-time slavery
  4. Learning that fruit is really a vegetable's ovary.
  3. You can be legally charged with Vehicular Homicide.
  2. That motherly sensation of naming that baby pig.
  1. "Nothing."

Minus-one year and counting... Just under the top of the heap, we Juniors are trying to learn what the rest of the world is going to expect from us... without college prep courses like AP English, we work towards a future that, for now, is just out of reach. But this third year of secondary is essential for making choices; with greater flexibility in class schedules, we begin to shape our own courses, stretching out toward what we deem important and essential. And as we go, we know we are the

What was your most embarrassing moment?

"I fell asleep in History and started snoring."
-Mark Reynolds

"When I was a freshman in track I pulled down my warm-up pants and realized I forgot my shorts."
-Matt Staver

"One day in elementary school I stood up and sang "Born to be Wild". Then I realized it was silent reading. I was so embarrassed."
-Jennica Castle

"I fell down the stairs head first in the auditorium. Everyone laughed and my face turned bright red."
-Becky Chandler

"In the old school I slipped and hit my head on the trophy case. All the trophies shook and a bunch of football players stood there laughing at me. I wanted to cry because my head hurt really bad."
-Robyn Szekeres

"At the State soccer game, when I thought we won and went running out onto the soccer field cheering and screaming in front of everybody."

-Whitney Schroeder

"After I just got my permit, I got rear-ended."

-Rhiannon Erbert

"I was pulled over two times in five minutes."

-Chris Buckner

"I got my rear wheel stuck in an open manhole while driving off-road."

-Brianna Martray

"I hit a stop sign the very first time I drove; I mistook the gas pedal for the brake."

-Jeff Veesaert

"Before a red light I slammed on my brakes and slid into the middle of the intersection."

-Danielle Murillo

"My sister crashed into the back of a portable cement mixer. We had to pay for the damage on the truck and for a new mixer."

-Sarah Gorshing

"I was driving, and I rear-ended some guy and my airbag full of Jiffy-Pop Popcorn came out."
